

Make a square on each side of the triangle and place the number of units of each. Add the two sides together, and this number is the total number of units in the square drawn on the hypotenuse.

